CONKLING'S CABAL.

Standing Steadfast in Albany.

The Political Puzzle as Difficult as Ever.

THE'S COMMENTS

New York, June 2 The times on the Albany situation says Concentration on Conkling would possess at least the recommendation of being as a solvent on the Conkling ranks, which are reported as more compact and more stagnant than they have been during the last few days They claim at least three votes from unsuspected sources today, and profess to be able to win in the end from sixty eighty of their opponents to unite upon any candidate The majority beyond doubt of Conkling's allies do not wish to see the mischievous system of which Conkling has been the chief exponent continued at Washington with a change only in the management It may be too much to hope that the men who are to be chosen to succeed Conkling and Platt should be known as friends of the reform that has been made but they ought to at least [illegible] this movement of a new machine in place of the old a mere change in engineers would fall very far short of what the republican party desires and expects There is, unfortunately some confusion that this fact is not appreciated at Albany The first thing that should be done is to send the [illegible] the senate who are not compromised in the opposite direction If this be not done it will be found that the victory gained will be a very barren one

THE QUESTION OF THE HOUR

The Herald's Albany dispatches from our correspondent at Albany show that the friends of Conkling are resolute How far they will follow him is the question of the hour There are talks of demonstrations That step is possible and probable but at the same time so grave that we should not venture upon the responsibility of advising it If such a combination could be made it would satisfy the independent element of the country If he can not be Cæsar he can be Coriolanus

CREATING A SENSATION

The Herald's Albany dispatch of Conkling to Mahone has created a genuine sensation here Representative stalwarts say it has very great significance and predictions are made that it will have a marked effect on political affairs Conkling has placed himself and friends on record for all that is good in Mahone's policy, and have taken just the opposite ground of that adopted by Garfield and Blaine It is claimed that the senators and assemblymen who vote against the reelection of Conkling and Platt practically oppose the sentiments uttered in the senator's resolutions dispatch

A MANY CANDIDATES

The Graphic's Albany special says There is trouble in the camp of the administration men growing out of the multitude of candidates The difficulty is to find a stalwart who can break the Conkling column Depew wants Cornell others want Crowley or Lapham There is intriguing in each direction The friends of Conkling are bolder this morning than at any time during the contest The stalwart organ calls upon the republicans to retain Conkling as leader of the party, and asks his opponents to name their man who is to take his place as leader It is in the failure of the half breeds to unite upon a candidate that the stalwarts see their opportunity It is suspected that Conkling has had several members active with the half-breeds, who are kept for the express purpose of preventing an agreement upon candidates

THE HALF BREEDS MISTAKE

New York, June 2—A special to the Express says half breed republicans are in a terrible quandary In the beginning of the fight Senator Robertson and his staff mapped a programme which was not to be extended and which provided only for the defeat of Conkling That, of course would also shelve Platt as well The day and hour to rally around when the most sanguine of Roscoe's friends were forced to acknowledge their leader defeated The admission induced half breeds not only to abuse the Boss but altered their first programme by attempting to replace Conkling and Platt with two pronounced enemies of the stalwarts This amendment has exhibited the best intent and forced a split, which may inflict irreparable injury It is to get out of this unfortunate quandary that a secret meeting was held last night One thing is certain if the determination to land two half breeds a winner is the programme it will be battle, and to the bitter end Conkling's friends are active members who will cling to him until he retires from the race and after that to any two men who are in sympathy with him Besides these there are thirteen members who are anxious to cast their ballots for Conkling but drop not do so and accept the sentence of their indignant constituencies This then makes a total of forty eight votes for the stalwarts, which is twenty two more than is required to break the deadlock Should Robertson and Woodin to break the deadlock extend the olive branch and accord two or one of the vacancies to Conkling's friends it would be regarded as a virtual back down and weakness, which would tend to rebuild the waning power of the opposition

PERHAPS A RECESS

Albany June 2—A resolution to adjourn sine die Saturday was lost in the assembly today by a vote of 49 to 68 only democrats voting yea and the compromise resolution to take a recess from Friday till Tuesday next was adopted ayes, 81 noes 56

CONKLING GOES TO NEW YORK

New York, June 2—Conkling left Albany tonight for New York, called away by legal business He will return to Albany as soon as the business is completed

TWO OPINIONS

Silas B Dutcher about vindicated for Conkling and Platt said It is satisfactory enough to us as it stands We have sufficient votes to command The situation and developments are expected today and tomorrow which will give us increased strength The vote for Cornell and Crowley will not stay with them but come back to Conkling and Platt for the first break The prospect is more hopeful for the stalwart side than it has appeared since the beginning of the contest

Senator Lester Jenkins, in behalf of the administration said It is impossible to tell at this moment who will be the choice of the convention for our side I should not be surprised if developments were such that the Edwards and half breeds would constitute a force It may be Cornell and Depew which would attract support from both wings I don't think the stalwarts are mad with [illegible] If Cornell or Crowley [illegible] family rather have him than a half breed and the half breeds are [illegible] to have him

THE HALF BREEDS PLAN

New York, June 2—The Commercial Albany special says The half breeds policy is not to lock Cornell in place of Platt but the end of enough of Conkling's present supporters to give them the required 81 votes Before this is done the half breeds are to require of their allies that the half breeds shall have the absolute right to name Conkling's successor Then they will name Lapham Lapham and the allies will be compelled to assent

The treasury department today purchased 370,000 ounces of fine bullion for delivery at the mint in San Francisco Carson and Philadelphia mints

It is very generally expected that D S Alexander, of Indiana, will be appointed fifth auditor of the treasury in place of Edy, who will be transferred to the position of the sixth auditor

The treasury department will to morrow issue another circular letter relative to excursion steamers for the information of officers, inspectors in general as well as for the information of the traveling public, who are invited to present to the proper officers authenticated proofs of violations of the steamboat law, in order that offenders may be prosecuted Inspectors will be required to exact from captains and owners a strict compliance in all cases with the requirements of the law

Banquet to Minister White

Berlin, June 2—Professors Mommsen Curtius and Treitschke and Doctor Nachtigal, the African travelers were present at the banquet to Minister White last night White spoke with diplomatic skill of the copious tide of German emigration now pouring into the United States and of the very acceptable element thus infused into his composite nation

No Voting Yet

Concord, N H, June 2—In the legislature this morning the votes for governor and council were declared The governor's vote is as follows Whole number 80,104, necessary to choice, 43,053 Frank Jones, 40,819, Charles H Bell, 44,432 Bell was declared elected.

STICKNEY'S VICTIMS.

Funeral of Mrs. Deveraux in Denver.

Mrs. Stickney Arrested and Made to Testify.

FUNERAL OF MRS DEVERAUX

Denver June 2—The funeral of Mrs Deveraux one of the victims of Jennie's murderous tool place this afternoon Services were held at the St Johns Episcopal church Quite a sensation was caused by Dean Hart's refusal to allow the dead to be removed from the coffin at the church Mr Deveraux had notified the undertaker to inform friends who wished to view the remains that the lid would be removed at the church for that purpose This afternoon on the arrival at the church the dean positively refused to allow the lid to be removed at the church A large crowd was present at the services

MRS STICKNEY'S ARREST

The News this morning has the following particulars of the arrest of Mrs Stickney the wife of the murderer It became generally known upon the street in the form of a report that Mrs [illegible] had been arrested and rumor had it that she was then en route for Denver and would arrive on the evening train over the Kansas Pacific It will be remembered that Sheriff Springer on Tuesday evening after taking it to consider from all the details of the crime and Mrs Stickney's apparent connection with it immediately telegraphed in various directions for that lady's apprehension It was known that she disappeared with her little girl just about the time of the departure of the morning train for Kansas City and notwithstanding the fact that her letter spoke of California as a probable point where she might bring up it the sheriff made up his mind that the lady was making for Chicago

The telegrams sent were promptly answered, and at Brookville yesterday morning when Mrs Stickney stepped into the breakfast room she was notified of her arrest and the determination to return her forthwith to Denver The lady is said to have been very indignant at the announcement of her arrest but when informed of the circumstances of Campau's tragic death and the death of an altogether innocent party besides and that her husband had committed the terrible deed her courage and her fortitude failed, and she broke down completely After the effect of the first shock had had time to pass away, Mrs Stickney declared herself not only willing to return to Denver, but quite anxious to do so She pictured to herself the companion of her joys and her sorrows a lone and forsaken prisoner behind the grim bars of a jail over his head hung the terrible charge of murder It is quite probable that upon considering these things the fleeing wife made up her mind that her place was by his side

Yesterday's eastern bound train had among its list of passengers Fred C Farmer under sheriff, who was bound for Brookville to bring the fair prisoner hither This it was that gave rise to the report that she had been arrested and would be in on the evening train The latter part of this statement is however untrue and is equally impossible, for the train passing Brookville was too far ahead of the one meeting yesterday's to make the thing practical As a consequence the arrival of Undersheriff Farmer and his female prisoner will not take place until tomorrow

As was stated yesterday morning the bodies of the two victims were removed to the coroner's office that of Campau on the same evening of his death and that of Mrs Deveraux yesterday morning early The latter arrangement was made in order to give the ladies of the house an opportunity of preparing the remains for burial Yesterday when the news became general of the terrible affair and it became understood the bodies were both at Brown's establishment public curiosity was at once headed for that place All day long there was a stream of people pouring into the neat front office, and at some hours it was almost impossible to gain admittance so great was the throng Curiosity, however remained unsatisfied at least until evening for the bodies were in the basement, and assistants were busily engaged with them That of Campau was embalmed by direction of his father in Detroit and material sent on at once in charge of a faithful messenger

Mrs Stickney arrived today on the Kansas Pacific train and her evidence regarding Tuesday's murder was taken by the coroner's jury The verdict will probably be returned tomorrow

THE LEADVILLE SHOOTING

Further Particulars of the Shooting of Lyle.

Leadville, June 3—The Herald this morning contains an extended account of the shooting of Lyle by Lynch The Herald says How the shooting occurred no one appeared to know, the only one who saw any shots fired being Mr Hayes, Lynch's partner Mr Hayes stated to a reporter that he was at work in a tunnel about one hundred feet from the scene of the shooting He heard a shot while working and thinking that probably a difficulty was occurring below, he rushed out and down the hill He saw Lynch behind a huge boulder, and guessing he was the one who was doing the shooting he Hayes yelled For God's sake, don't shoot! But just then another shot was fired by Lynch Hayes looked to ascertain whom and what he was shooting, but he could see no one, a clear view of the other side of the gulch being obstructed by thickets of brush on each side of a small stream which flows down the centre of the abrupt depression He crossed the gulch but he had no sooner than stepped on the rude bridge which spans the narrow stream than he was astounded by the sight which met his eyes Stretched out on the ground was Lyle apparently dead In the right hand was the revolver, while in the left he clutched the lines attached to the horse he had been driving the pallid animal standing near him seemed to be [illegible] urged on by the use of a whip

Hayes in the excitement of what he had done and the latter still retaining his title hastily walked up the gulch saying he was going to Leadville to deliver himself up to the authorities A short time after this he passed Mr J S Edwards and Mr John Dunne as foolishly the two men by saying There's a dead man down in camp!

Yours, jeering said Edwards

No I'm not—replied the [illegible] and then adding up his title This is what did it

He then went on his way and Messrs Edwards and Dunne went down the gulch to the spot where the dead man lay both afterward coming to Leadville and giving the last information

A number of men heard the two shots and affirm that several minutes intervened between them Mr Hayes stated to the reporter that the first shot was undoubtedly the one which proved fatal The second shot was fired low and a deep furrow it had plowed in the ground near where the man lay and only a few feet beyond plainly indicated that it had been fired unless The fact that Lynch fired at his man after the latter fell would plainly show that he was actuated by a feeling of the most intense hatred

The revolver found in the hand of Lyle was identified as the one he had taken away from Lynch the day previous and it is stated by many men in the neighborhood that in their opinion the weapon was placed in the hand of the dead man by the murderer previous to his departure for Leadville

A warrant was sworn out for the arrest of Lynch and Deputy sheriffs Fountain and Miller started out armed with the papers for the purpose of capturing the assassin, if possible They learned that the man had surrendered himself however, and therefore did not prolong their search

LYNCH'S STORY

The murderer in conversation with a Herald reporter said I never saw Lyle again until this morning when he came riding up to my cabin in Bennett's buggy I was sawing wood at the time and had my back turned I feared trouble and had requested one of the Hayes boys to warn me if he saw a man approach in a buggy Hayes saw Lyle coming and mentioned to me, When I turned and looked I saw Lyle in a buggy with a revolver in his hip I set the saw down by a big granite rock near the cabin door went into the cabin, got my carbine, and stepped back out of the door behind the big rock Lyle said "Come d—n you, you're too big a coward to shoot Lay that old carbine down He had, by this time, jumped out of the buggy and came to the front of his house and taken sight. I pulled the trigger and the gun stopped. I pulled the trigger again and the gun went off and Lyle fell There were some bushes between Lyle and myself and I did not know whether I had killed him or not Hayes came down and I asked Can you see the

Hayes replied, I guess you have got him dead " I thought Lyle was playing possum and knowing the character of the man, I shot him again After I shot the second time I walked across the gulch to see if he was dead I said to Hayes, I am going up to my camp (which is about half a mile distant) to tell the boys, and don't you touch him or suffer him to be touched until the proper officers come " When I arrived at my camp I sent my partners down to see that he was not touched until the officers came I told them that I was going to Leadville to give myself up, and they said that was the best thing to do I told them to tell the officers if they arrived before I reached Leadville, that I had gone to give myself up to the authorities I know I did the act in self-defense and am satisfied had my reasons of the result

Lynch is about about forty five years of age has a full beard, is plain appearance, and is dressed in a suit of clothes peculiar to miners, and to judge from his looks, is the last person that one would believe to be guilty of such a terrible crime as murder He told his story in a straightforward manner and did not seem to be the least disturbed by the position in which he was placed, but on the contrary, acted as a man who believed that he was perfectly justified in doing what he did, even though it was the taking of human life

Imaginary Victory

New York, June 2—The Spirit of the Times, ment the victory of Iroquois, says It is to be hoped that our transatlantic cousins may not view the situation through green glasses, but will accept the result as worthily achieved and as a just verdict in favor of actual merit John McCullough and Billy Florence backed Iroquois to win $5,500

Chicago, June 3—The Tribune's New York special denies that Lorillard won two million dollars on Iroquois but says the amount was only $12,500, of which he ordered $5,000 turned over to Archer, who rode Iroquois

SOCK AND BUSKIN.

Jane Eyre at the Opera House.

Miss Thompson and Mr. Sheridan Make an Artistic Success.

The presentation of Jane Eyre at the Opera House last evening by Miss Charlotte Thompson supported by Mr W F Sheridan, was one of the most artistic and enjoyable entertainments that we have had the pleasure of seeing in Colorado Springs The audience was delighted and cold words of criticism would be out of place upon an occasion fraught with so much enjoyment Warm words of praise are especially appropriate, and they are appropriate because they are true

The play was given with the following cast of characters

CHARACTERS IN FRONT OF

Jane Eyre	Miss Charlotte Thompson
Mrs Reed	Miss Annie Montague
Col Henry Dent	Mr C G Craig
Jack Breckenridge	Sidney Davies
Robert Reed	Wm Verone
James	J L Woodson

CHARACTERS IN SCENERY

Jane Eyre	Miss Charlotte Thompson
Mrs Fairfax	Miss C L Johnson
Mrs Reed	Miss Annie Montague
Georgiana Reed	Lizzie Goodrich
Adele	Little Amie
Lord Edward Rochester	Mr W F Sheridan
Rev Brocklehurst	J L Woodson
Jacob	Leadore

Miss Thompson's adaptation of Charlotte Bronte's great romance is a pleasing one affording opportunities for strong emotional effects and yet bereft of those painful scenes which harrow the feelings in the adaptation used by Miss Clara Morris The play ends happily with Lord Rochester's life and fortune saved by the bravery of Jane Eyre from the fire kindled by the insane inmate of the tower Besides, Rochester is freed from the treachery attributed to him by the novelist and the insane woman is explained to be the wife of his dead brother and not his own These changes while they contribute to the enjoyment of the spectator do not materially weaken the drama Upon the whole we like Miss Thompson's adaptation which lightens the sombre original and makes it pleasing as well as powerful

We turn with pleasure to the contemplation of Miss Thompson as Jane Eyre There was a naturalness, grace and power in her acting that won unanimous recognition The well worn phrase, useful however, and very expressive, comes to one's mind while witnessing Miss Thompson's acting, and one can not resist saying that she manifests that greatest of histrionic acquirements, namely, the art which conceals art Her voice is melodious and her motions full of grace and those who saw her last evening must say with Lord Rochester that her smile lights up her face with a rare radiance Miss Thompson has more charms of face and figure than Clara Morris and yet in the quieter portions of the play reminds one pleasantly of that great actress in similar situations. A comparison between the two would not result unfavorably to Miss Thompson, although their methods in the expression of strong emotion radically differ The character of Jane Eyre, as depicted last evening was the revelation of a generous and noble nature, a nature that yields to kindness, but is inflexible to cruelty, a nature that recognizes that nobility which is kindred to its own

Mr Sheridan did not divide the honors with Miss Thompson he earned honors of his own He is a manly actor of a strong and robust school, and his delineation of the misanthrope, yet innately noble, Rochester was artistic and worthy of the highest praise His voice is thrilling in its power, and his action apt in the expression of his thought His description of the sword picture painted by the governess was masterly and a fine bit of acting In the last act Mr Sheridan was especially strong and effective, and won enthusiastic plaudits from the audience Miss Thompson and Mr Sheridan were called before the curtain twice during the evening, and there is no doubt that they have made a genuine success

The support was exceptionally good Miss Goodrich, as Georgiana, was pleasing and acted with intelligence Miss Montague as Mrs Reed played an ungrateful part successfully Little Annie, as Adele, was natural and Mrs Johnson, as Mrs Fairfax was satisfactory

The comedy element was represented by Mr Davidson as the professor and as the servant, and by Mr Woodson as Frederick Lynn Mr Craig as Colonel Dent, played a small part well

We understand that at the close of the present engagement Miss Thompson will return home and that Mr Sheridan will remain here with the present company during next week rehearsing for a starring tour in the Shakespearian and classic drama This evening the company will play Ingomar, with Mr Sheridan in the title role and Miss Thompson as Parthenia We can assure the public that not to attend will result in the loss of a truly delightful entertainment

WHO KILLED THURMAN?

Ignacio Accuses the Pah-Utes.

Colonel Henry Page the agent of the southern agency, has partially investigated the causes of the Thurman massacre, and is now at Fort Lewis, concluding his labors According to latest advices he says

The Utes now at the agency, including Ignacio Mariano and Naraguntup tell him that a band of Pah Utes were camped near the Dolores, just before the killing of Thurman, Max and Smith There were six lodges of them They had been horse racing, as is the custom every fall and spring in that vicinity. The Southern Utes were the winners in the race After they had left, one man, named Cuvasa Blanco missed several of his horses He went in pursuit, with some of his bucks and found twelve of them lying dead in a narrow cañon and finally found the thirteenth horse alive. On his return to where his lepees and women and children were, he learned about the murder

Mariano and Ignacio say that in their opinion the band who killed their horses is the same that killed the white men They also say that they do not wear the same costume or speak the same language as the Utes The costume is somewhat similar to that worn by the Navajos, and they wear a bandana handkerchief tied about the head, as the Navajos do The language is also similar to that of the Navajos and their captains communicated with them through the Navajo language Colonel Page gives these statements for what they are worth and does not vouch for their truth

Conkling is still in the cold No wonder he feels Cornell

Minister White pleases the Germans to tell them that we are joyfully welcoming German immigrants

Leadville and Denver are painfully unfortunate lately Murders and accidents have been daily occurrences

The Victoria disaster seems to have already led to more officials more cautious the treasury will issue circular letter described in our telegraphic news Now that the season of excursions has arrived too much attention cannot be given to the subject It is all very well to blame after an accident, but that does not save the lost Let good laws be made and then enforced

The opinion so long held that Conkling is a high toned statesman will not continue much longer It is disgraceful in the eyes of the leading newspapers to see the two senators wrangling for office And when the vice-president enters into the fight and forgets himself and his position in his desire to help his "boss, the spectacle is enough to sicken even a depraved consul

The disturbance occasioned by the attempt of a senator of the United States to set himself up as the monarch is exciting some attention on the other side of the Atlantic The London Times opens a leader with this remark The opinion expressed between President Garfield and Mr Conkling is that a senator from the state of New York and the most powerful politician in the Republican party outside of the cabinet is not a person for the tranquility of the Republic

It is obvious that Europe is anxious to see no Europe to exalt republics above all other forms of government there is not much in the political system of the United States to invite imitation upon this side of the Atlantic

It is likely that the world's fair will be held in Boston The Herald of that city says "Boston is abundantly able to plan the world's fair and carry the project in successful execution Of that there can be no doubt She cannot however, do it with the irresolute spirit that brought New York to grief To carry out the scheme is outlined requires right economy of time between now and the date proposed for opening the exposition and the gentlemen who are to meet to consider the subject should be prepared on that occasion not merely to talk, but to act They should be able to say there and then that they will approve or condemn the plan, and if the decision is not favorable the essential preliminary steps should be immediately taken

The New York Evening Post of seventy-five years ago contains some curious advertisements Among others are the following, "Wanted to Purchase — A black servant girl ten years old one from the country preferred

"For Sale — A healthy active black girl perfectly healthy, seventeen years old "for want of employ

"Run Away — A black man named Lewis for whom five dollars reward will be paid

"The country seat on the Hudson known as Strawberry Hill is to be sold at auction at the Tontine Coffee House It is eight miles from the City Hall, and its value is enhanced in consequence of the laying out of a new street to Harlem Lane

"At the same time there will be sold the double three-story house of Gulian Verplanck, Esq, 16 Wall street

The sharpest attack on Mr Ingersoll the infidel missionary comes from the pen of the venerable Hurlow Weed He compares him and his work with the eminent evangelist, Mr Moody, and finds him without usefulness at all the points wherein the latter has attempted to serve his fellow men Great has been Mr Ingersoll's boldness, and great his personal magnetism, but Mr Weed asks him to show in what respect he has done or is doing anything to improve society, as it was improved years ago at the Five points in New York, or as Mr Moody is trying to improve the young pupils at Northfield Mass He begs to know what salutary reforms he has inaugurated or even suggested, or in what manner and to what extent he has contributed to the general welfare or happiness of his fellow citizens This practically puts the eloquent Ingersoll on the gridiron What can he say in reply

PUBLIC HANGING

The question of whether a man shall be hung publicly or privately has been discussed for years Opinions are evenly divided While many are in favor of having an execution be formed before the gaze of any inclined to be emphatic in asserting that the ceremony should be conducted in as private a manner as possible

There are reasons to be examined on both sides First it is contended by those favoring public executions that a great lesson is taught, and that the spectacle is such that many are deterred from crime when they observe the awful consequences A public hanging will naturally attract only the more hardened people it is thought and they may possibly have their fears so worked upon that they will in the future lead better lives If this were so, and if the evil tendencies might be checked, and bad lives made better than hanging, whipping and other punishments might be performed in the most public manner and no one having the welfare of the people at heart would complain It would be a boon could be given by most revolting punishments then we would say let all our executions be performed before the public

On the other hand it is contended that public executions cause There are many natures, low and coarse which delight in gallows shows simply for the notoriety which this brings the perpetrator To have one's features in the Police Gazette to have one's crimes thus reported and described is an ambition of a life time And it is this love of celebrity which would be catered to by a public execution It is conceded a romantic epoch in one's life time to have an opportunity of declaring upon the scaffold and before an attentive audience that the deed was accidental or that it was perpetrated for revenge No doubt a criminal will at all times feel death but the more publicity the better is that uppermost in his mind

We believe that public hanging should be avoided This would deprive a great opportunity of considering the question Should the court decide that an execution should take place then the alternative will be forced upon the people of having a private execution And it is to be hoped that private and strictly private hanging will be the rule It is a revolting thought that any human being should be exposed to the gaze of a simply curious crowd during his last moments We do not believe that it will tend to deter others from committing the crime which they see punished Let the condemned man be hung from the public for his last moments be alone and the lesson will be fully effective

A Robber's Cave in Jersey

From the Philadelphia Record

The robberies of houses stores and railway stations within fifty miles or so of Peter son N J during the past three months have led to the discovery, according to the New York Sun that a whole family have been criminals from infancy, and their children have been regularly trained to follow in their footsteps Their plundering and thefts have been indiscriminate, attended with violence Horses and carriages cows calves and sheep jewelry, silverware, clothing agricultural implements, and house utensils were all levied upon with a system which showed that a master mind controlled the operations

The family consists of three brothers with their wives and children They are descended from a respectable family of Orange county, and still have relatives living in the vicinity of their depredations who are earning an honest living The heads of the family are Hiram, Peter and James Hannion In the band are the wife of James their son William a lad of fifteen, and the children of theirs and Edmund Shaw, a nephew of the brothers, a boy of about the same age as William

Hiram and Peter, after a career of crime were sentenced to seventeen years imprisonment for an assault on a little girl in Binghampton After serving thirteen years their term with commutation, expired in March and they left Auburn for New York They went directly to the house of their sister, Mrs Shaw, in Fifty first street, near Ninth avenue While in prison their brother James had, with his wife joined upon a precarious living in the mountains Later on he parted with his wife Shaw had died and left his sister a widow He had died and left his sister a widow He was washed for a leader, and had served during the rebellion in the navy

After staying there for a time with their sister a plan of operations on a large scale was matured and they returned to their old haunts They took with them Jeffie Shaw who was the mother left for the west They crossed the Twenty fifth street ferry and went direct to the house of their brother James in Peterson, who was on the alert for their arrival To get acquainted with the neighborhood after their long absence one worked for a week or so in the Standard oil works and the other on the Ridgewood and Rutherford branch of the Erie Then they began operations on a small scale concealing their plunder on Carroll street in Paterson

It was early in April when they started out from Paterson to rob all along the road At a place called Lodi they broke into the house of a Paterson they bound and gagged themselves together with fearful oaths as the boy Eddie confesses He says they were formed in crime in Hiram and organized as the Cedar Knights He says Hiram was the commander in chief of the Cedar Knights and his uncle Peter was dubbed the Prince Appendix Lodi's other uncle Hiram's wife and the children were enrolled in the military style as high privates With each of the twelve Hiram forced them to sign their names to a paper and James who is anxious to turn state evidence lays great stress on the fact that Hiram signed his name in blood

Preparatory steps were taken to consulting with the Stoms and discover a select circle of whom have been in jail Hiram Hannion's wife was interested with the association

They would have stolen the state at such a combination had not an effort been made

Detective Bogardus finally got the Eight to all through the woman who pointed out the hiding place Aided by a constable from Orange they made a raid about daybreak a few days ago Hiram Hannion however had become suspicious and had run in all directions to run for the woods When the officers reached the place they found the inhabitants were missing After a search the officers found the children were found in hiding and were taken to Newark The Hannion's were discovered in the woods Peter and James were discovered in the woods They were taken to Newark and locked up Hiram and William were captured but the latter Hiram Hannion succeeded in handing his companion although the whole neighborhood turned out with guns revolvers and clubs to fill so in the capture

There was a great deal of excitement in Paterson when it became known that Mrs Hannion's relations being in the Empire and nearly all the arranged Their were many suits of men's and women's clothing, the latter comprising costly silk dresses and satin shoes Upon a small square and other articles The usual of underclothing sheets and pillow cases showed that clothes lines had been robbed Stolen goods were stored in the place of were found in abundance Large quantities of wearing apparel and articles were also found

From the Boston Post

FARMINGTON Wyoming Mar 31 1882

To Hon James A Garfield President of the United States and a Portion of the Nation

SIR—I have the honor to present herewith my resignation as United States commissioner for the second judicial district court of Wyoming Territory

I do this in order to see whether I am desired by the people of Wyoming Territory I wish to know whether the people think less of me than they do of your Executive administration

The history of my office here in Laramie has been exactly as it has during the last two years only 5 7 as but the population is considerable

You have since your inauguration appointed a man sent into the senate for confirmation a cross-eyed claim from Bitter Creek to be postmaster for the port of Stinking Water with the wealth of patronage which it carries with it You have also appointed Thomas Hood a Mormon of Green Mountain to be minister to Polecat Gulch knowing very well that the patronage of Polecat Gulch belongs to me

Ever since your inauguration you have balked and frustrated me in a thousand different ways till I am forced to send in to you my resignation with the assurance that the whole national fabric will go to ever and smash about the first of June

In addition to all the rest you promised me that you would not appoint any one as brigadier of the post at Oshkosh without consulting me and as soon as my back was turned you deliberately appointed a bald headed pedagogue from Vinegar Hill to the position

As soon as my resignation is made public the Territory of Wyoming will withdraw from the Union and form a monarchy, and make it so different hot for you and your one horse circus that you will wish to have stuffed mules along the staging circuit throughout your natural life

If Wyoming chooses my action as I think she will you can bet my life existence that your administration will be the gloomiest stretch of wind desolate track that the world has ever known I remember it is not the paltry sum of $15 a year salary that I have lost but the change which has been taken from me

You will plead communicate to the senate and house of representatives that I have resigned and that as I am like such a relation to going into mourning in behalf of the country I am liable I am as they say to be

Hoping that you will manage to wriggle along through your present term of office in some way or other I have been [illegible] more in sorrow than in anger

Your obedient servant

BILL NYE

Shipping Bees to America

Rome Italy

The cultivation of bees in North Italy has given rise to an industry which promises likely to increase in importance rapidly, the supplying given bees and honey to various countries in Europe and to America The colonies are placed in wooden boxes, each queen bee is placed two hundred working bees planted by about two hundred working bees The hives have four slits for air inside and two small frames one containing a full, the other an empty honeycomb they vary in size according to the distance—they are sent The Italian bees have the reputation of being more docile and productive than any other kind of bees, hence their value

The Female Nihilists

From Life

They are mostly daughters of poor army officers or petty civil officers or even of shop keepers who, feeling the influence of modern times, are anxious to rise above the level of their parents course, ignorant people in the main Filling by their own efforts or by the aid of influential patrons the girls gain school training in a high school where their brains are crammed with a heterogeneous mass of knowledge At 19 they leave, not as mass of knowledge At 19 they leave, not as mass of knowledge to return to their homes finding, in their turn, become nihilists they abandon their parents meeting intolerable they abandon their homes for some wretched lodgings and live out a miserable existence by giving family and lessons—food is scarce the feminine pupils cannot dress up impossible the repelling power of family affection is absent shrinking hopeless and discontented when they grow hopeless and discontented when they grow hopeless and discontented when they form socialistic associations capitals adopt their ideas and having found an object for their life with feminine rashness devote themselves to the cause even to death

JOHNNY WANLESS FOUND.

Picked up by the Marshal in Boulder

The Boulder Herald gives the following account of the discovery of the Wanless boy who ran away from Bunker Institute in Denver and whose loss has been announced far and wide "Monday night at about midnight Marshal Saunders got a little boy, about eleven years old, walking the streets to find some place to lie down to sleep The marshal took him to Cupid's to sleep and this morning told Dr Ambrose of the affair When the Herald reporter went around he found the boy sitting in the buggy with the doctor, who was subjecting him to close questioning The boy told a very plain story, well hatched up and with some foundation to back it He gave his name as Charlie Bacon He had just come from North Park

We lived on a ranch so far from town that it took three days to go to town and three to return The nearest ranch to our place was three miles My father died about six weeks ago and my mother about four weeks ago My father and mother were married by Rev James Barnes and Jones, buried my father, and the same man married my mother Some ladies attended my mother's funeral A man came along there with a wagon and I asked him to let me ride with him

The next story was as follows My father died about six weeks before my mother died about four weeks ago I then went to live with my uncle in Laramie city He did not treat me well and I runaway from him I then went up to the ranch again It took me about seven days to get there Then this man came down and I came with him to Boulder When we went through Laramie city I hid in the bottom of the wagon, because my uncle and the police were mentioning me We came by way of the stage line into Estes park and in a big mountain, I have forgotten the name I got off outside of town and the man went on to Leadville He told me to get out as there might be some danger

The third story was this Now I'll tell you exactly how it was I ran away from my uncle and went to the ranch and then I came with this man I hid in the bottom of the wagon when we passed through Laramie We then went to Cheyenne We came through Longmont and Valmont and I got off because there was danger My parents are dead and I want to go to my uncle

At the fourth attempt the boy said My name is Johnnie Wanless I ran away from the Bunker institute in Denver because the boys always clubbed me My father lives in Colorado Springs and my mother is in Laramie Here's a letter from my mother and that will prove I'm the right boy" And he exhibited a well conscious of victory

Rapid Promotion

The Durango Record has a paragraph to the effect that Judge Goudy, late of this city colonel as will be seen by the following item quoted from the Record Hon C W Burns district Judge and Colonel Frank E Goudy district attorney, arrived from Parrott City on Saturday and enjoyed Sunday in Durango A pleasant call from these gentlemen favorably impressed us with their legal and social—ability of which we had heard so much but had hitherto known so little The judge believes that Durango's future is great and expresses himself as in no wise opposed to living in our city provided that circumstances should so dictate his futurity, while the colonel is completely carried away with the idea of coming to the metropolis not as a guest but as a permanent limb of the law

AWFUL ACCIDENT

Two Leadville Children Terribly Mangled by Giant Powder

LEADVILLE Col, June 2—The Chronicle has an account of a terrible accident, which occurred a few minutes past one o'clock on upper Fourth street, involving a fate infinitely worse than death to two children The first intimation of the casualty was a terrific explosion audible for blocks and taking place in the midst of a cluster of small houses The crash was followed by piercing screams and an instant later the few who rushed out to investigate brought back the terrible news that two children had been terribly mangled by an explosion of giant powder Eight children of the neighborhood went into a common in the rear of the houses to play A quantity of wood had been split in the place and the ground was covered with a layer of chips and splinters Two of the little ones named Walter and Lottie Smith, sat down and began amusing themselves in the debris The little boy was only four years old, his sister six in picking up the chips from the ground Walter found a stick of a gray, pasty substance and shouted to his sister They concluded to break it open and see if anything was inside Walter found a large flat stone and placing the stick upon it began to strike the end with a piece of iron while his sister bent over to watch Several blows were struck and then with a stupendous crash the powder exploded, filling the air with debris and hurling the children half a dozen yards away The boy lay on his face for an instant and then gaining his feet began to run blindly towards the opening between the houses Striking against a post he fell down again, and once more tried to run but was too weak and sank down moaning piteously, while the blood from half a dozen wounds trickled over his little dress The girl was blown against the side of a house near by and was senseless when picked up Her flesh was literally filled with gravel and her forehead and face one great ghastly wound When her right hand, was lifted three fingers were found merely hanging by strips of ragged flesh and the bare and ragged bones protruded The boy's injuries were horrible and the little legs so crushed and mangled that it seemed cruel to torture as they certainly did in the house The slight body bore not a bruise at the wristband nothing left save the gaily striped and fast faded clothes Within the left hand had been we whether times of mangled flesh looking like nothing save chopped and pounded meat while both arms were full of splinters and gravel to the shoulder Terrible as these injuries were they strangely enough affected when it was found that both eyes were blown completely out of the sockets leaving the orbits of the blind The mother of the children was frenzied with grief and delirium had to be administered to quiet her

TRIBUNE TRIBULATIONS

Answer to the Complaint of Colonel Fisher

DENVER June 1 Tribune knows Tribune will say regarding the suit brought by C W Fisher against the Tribune company to compel a transfer on the books of certain stocks The stock in question was in Mr Fisher's name owns was lost till sold to the late Geo B Robinson on condition that the legal title to the stock should not be complete for two years and that in the meantime the other holders should have an option on the purchase and vote the stock The certificates of stock were turned over to him signed in blank to protect his interest and an agreement made that the stock was not to be transferred upon the books of the company to protect others in the pool After Robinson's death his administrators demanded a transfer of the stock but were refused An examination of the situation convinced them of their inability to change the original contract and they desisted When Mr Fisher came into possession he made the stock his right and was elected He purchased the stock with full knowledge that he was purchasing a lawsuit In the complaint made in the district court in Denver he asserts that he is a resident of Nevada and a citizen of Nevada and that the Tribune is a corporation of Colorado and that the stockholders are citizens of Nevada and Colorado and that the amount in controversy exceeds $2,000 The Tribune will not discuss the merits of the case in the columns of its paper but will defend in the courts and it has no fear of the result

IRISH AGITATION

Extraordinary Address Made by Bishop Croke

DUBLIN June 1—Archbishop Croke of Thurles yesterday concluded a most extraordinary address to his flock on the land question He made an appeal to Gladstone to stop further evictions In his speech he said Eviction has a peculiar meaning in Ireland It means the depopulation of the country, degradation of the spirit of vengeance against the greatest empire in the world which has treated Ireland worse than ever an empire treated a dependency He would therefore say to Gladstone If you value the friendship of Ireland, if you value the good name of England, if you value the lives of our people, if you do not wish to perpetuate a national feud and the sanguinary traditions that have ruled this country for ages, blot out from the statute books the eviction, and let no man hereafter be turned out of his land unless it is clear that the money which have met his engagements was wastefully and foolishly dissipated (Loud cheers) It was only the other day that the venerable parish priest of Moycarkey told me that when he became priest of that parish it contained 1,200 families There we at present only 400 Let me ask Mr Gladstone what has become of the 800 families once so happy in their—humble homes, who have disappeared from the parish Many have gone to the grave, many to the workhouse, and many to the great republic of the west, bearing with them undying hatred to the country that banished them from their native land. [Cheering] At the same time, if evictions are to go on I would advise you how to act Do not bring yourselves into collision with the authorities they are too strong for you If not, even for conscience's sake, for our own preservation for the sake of expediency if not of principle, we must act on the defensive We must offer passive resistance to those opposed to us In that way they will get tired of the contest, because a whole united people has never yet been defeated

In the evening his grace entered fully into the present position and direct of the land league. He declared the agitation was not due to Davitt nor Parnell nor their followers but to the fact that there was a mighty grievance and that the Irish people it had contemplated it unfairly and were determined to remove it, Without the priesthood of Ireland it would be impossible said his grace for the government to reach its present mighty dimensions The archbishop declared authoritatively that two years ago Parnell wished on Dublin and literally went down on his knees to him to ask him to use his influence to have the [illegible] in the movement

His grace concluded with the following remarkable declaration "I have to say this movement is not a revolutionary movement in the strict sense of the word It is a constitutional and lawful movement which we intend to push forward by most forcefully [Cheers] We don't intend to violate any law we intend to exhaust all constitutional remedies We are perfectly certain that the elasticity of the constitution will allow us the means of working energetically to the last and finally achieving the results we aim at We wish to produce an effect on England by peaceful force or by any manifestations of physical force, but by moral means We want to make our grievances known to the world to tell France and Spain, and Italy, and the United States and the great colonies that acknowledge the sway of Great Britain as does this country that we have been kept down by bayonets to the present time, and that by bayonets we are kept down at present Please God, we are now fully determined, bayonets or no bayonets (great cheering) to proclaim at all events our wants and to proclaim that we will not be satisfied until we get our rights and enlist in our behalf no swords, no guns no cannon, not Spain or Italy or the United States but the intelligent opinion of all intelligent nations of the world Therefore, this is not a revolutionary movement but it is conducted by the most religious people in the world and backed by the best, most holy, most self-sacrificing, most faithful and most uncompromising priesthood in the world [Great cheering] It is not an unjust movement dictated by selfish and to injury to anybody We appeal that these Welsh men that intend to do injury to any mortal man We monopolize the rights of the orders of the world and we grant our own rights at the same time and while we give to Cæsar the things that are Cæsar's we will assert for ourselves the things that are ours [Great cheers] What we want is a change for our own benefit in our own country and we will force the issue We will target the landlords Hundreds of landlords all the times we believe of the misery that have been committed the extermination of our race and the downfall so far as it was possible for them to do to abolish it of our country and we will begin a new score with the old mother country We will let them see that we are not only to flourish abroad but that in our own land we cannot be suppressed [Cheers] There is disagreement among the leaders of the people but these things are exaggerated Our unity is unbroken our spirit unsubdued and the result is that we are clear as day We must succeed"

Confiding is still in the cold. Now under the Jenkins Council.

Minister White pleases the Germans well by telling them that we may joyfully welcome Germans in the immigrants.

Leadville and Denver are particularly unfortunate lately. Murders and accidents have been daily occurrences.

The Victoria disaster seems to have had the effect to render officials more careful. The Treasury will issue circular letters described in our telegraphic news. Now that the season of excursions has arrived too much attention cannot be given to the subject. It is all very well to blame after an accident—but that does not save the lost. Let good laws be made and then enforced.

The opinion is gaining hold that Conkling is a high toned statesman will not continue much longer. It is disgraceful in the eyes of the leading newspapers to see the two senators wrangling for office. And when the vice president enters into the fight and forgets himself and his position in his desire to help his "boss," the spectacle is enough to sicken even a depraved public.

The disturbance occasioned in the attempt of a senator of the United States to set himself up as the Prince Regent, some attention on the part of the Atlantic. The Herald in commenting on the affair with this remark: "The personal rupture between President Garfield's administration and Mr. Conkling, which originated in the slat of New York, and the most powerful political run in the Republican party outside of the cabinet, is of all others for the tranquility of the Union."

That is, it is obvious that political meddling tend more in Europe to exalt republics above all other forms of government, there is not much in the political system of the United States to invite imitation upon this side of the Atlantic.

It is likely that the World's fair will be held in Boston. The Herald of that city says: "Boston is abundantly able to plan the world's fair and carry the project to successful execution. Of that there can be no doubt. She cannot, however, do it with the resolute spirit that brought New York to grief. To carry out the scheme as outlined requires rigid economy of time between now and the date proposed for opening the exposition, and the gentlemen who are to meet to consider the subject should be prepared on that occasion not merely to talk but to act. They should be able to say there and then that they will approve or condemn the plan, and if the decision is not favorable, the essential preliminary steps should be immediately taken."

The New York Evening Post of seventeen years ago contains some curious advertisements. Among others are the following: "Wanted to Purchase.—A black servant girl, ten years old, one from the country preferred."

"For Sale.—A smart, active black girl, perfectly healthy, seventeen years old, for want of employ."

"Run Away.—A black man named Lewis, for whom five dollars reward will be paid."

"The country seat on the Hudson known as Strawberry Hill is to be sold at auction at the Tontine Coffee House. It is eight miles from the City Hall, and its value is enhanced in consequence of the laying out of a new street to Harlem Lane."

"At the same time there will be sold the double three-story house of Gulian Verplanck, Esq., 16 Wall street."

The sharpest attack on Mr. Ingersoll the infidel missionary, comes from the pen of the venerable Thurlow Weed. He compares him and his work with the eminent evangelist, Mr. Moody, and finds him without usefulness at all the points wherein the latter has attempted to serve his fellow men. Great has been Mr. Ingersoll's boldness, and great his personal magnetism, but Mr. Weed asks him to show in what respect he has done or is doing anything to improve society as it was improved years ago at the Five Points in New York, or as Mr. Moody is trying to improve the young pupils at Northfield today. He begs to know what salutary reforms he has inaugurated or even suggested, or in what manner and to what extent he has contributed to the general welfare or happiness of his fellow citizens. This practically is the eloquent Ingersoll on the gridiron. What can he say in reply?

PUBLIC HANGING

The question of whether a man shall be hung publicly or privately has been discussed for years. Opinions are evenly divided. While many are in favor of having an execution performed before the gaze of any inclined, which, if it does, are emphatic in asserting that the ceremony should be conducted in as private a manner as possible.

There are reasons to be considered on both sides. First it is contended by those favoring public executions that a great lesson is taught, and that the spectacle is such that many are deterred from crime who—they observe the awful consequences. A public hanging will naturally attract only the more hardened people, it is thought, and they may possibly have their minds so worked upon that they will in the future lead better lives. If this were so, and if the evil criminals might be checked, and bad lives made better, then hanging, whipping and other punishments might be performed in the most public manner and no one having the welfare of the people at heart, would complain. It would be a reason could be given by any civilized punishments when we could say let all our executions be performed before the public.

On the other hand it is contended that publicity encourages crime. There are many natures low and base who delight in evil for its simply for the benefits which they claim the perpetration. To have one's features appear in the Police Gazette, to have one's career reported and dwelt portrayed is an ambition of a life time. And it is this love of celebrity which would be encouraged to be by public execution. It is considered by many that in one's life time to have an opportunity of declaring against the world, to murder the law, to show that the law was wrong or that it was perpetrated for revenge. No doubt a criminal will at all times, even death, but the more publicity the better is that an evil desire for fame encourages.

We believe that public hanging should be avoided. This city is likely to soon have an opportunity of considering the question. If the execution is to take place here the alternative will be forced on the people of having either a public or private one. And it is to be hoped that prior to that a strictly private hanging will be experimented. It is a very long thought that in this civilized world the criminal shall be exposed to the gaze of simply curious crowd. Human nature is curious. We do not wish to discuss that which these are punished. Let the culprit suffer, but let from the public. Let his last moments be alone and the lesson will be fully as effective.

A Robber's Cave in Jersey

From the Philadelphia Record

The robberies of houses, stores and navigable waters within fifty miles of Paterson, N. J., during the past three months have led to the discovery, according to the New York Sun, that a whole family from been criminals from infancy, and their children have been regularly trained to follow in their footsteps. Such robberies have been indiscriminate, attended with violence. Horses and carriages, cows, calves and sheep, jewelry, silverware, clothing, agricultural implements and house utensils were all looked upon with a system which showed that a master mind controlled the operations.

The family consists of three brothers with their wives and children. They are descended from a respectable family of Orangemen, and still have relatives living in the vicinity of their depredations who are earning an honest living. The heads of the family are Hiram, Peter and James Hopper. In the band are the wives of James, Thompson, William, a lad of 19, two sisters, Mrs. Chalmers, and Edmund Shaw, a nephew of the brothers, a boy of about the same age as William.

Hiram and Peter, after a career of crime, were sentenced to seventeen years imprisonment for an assault on a little girl, Hattie Brampton. After serving three or four years of their term with commutation, expired in March, and they left Auburn for New York. They went directly to the house of their sister, Mrs. Shaw, in Fifty first street, near Ninth avenue. While in prison their brother James had, with his wife, looked up a place of abode in and around Paterson, to which place the Shaws had fled and left their sister behind. He had worked for a farmer, and had received during the third year of the term.

After serving five years with their sister, a plan of operations was arranged. They took with them Hiram, who, when released, joined them at the Shaw's. Hiram, who was an old hand at the business, was sent forward to the house of their brother James in Paterson, who was on the alert for their arrival. To get acquainted with the neighborhood after their long absence, one worked for a week or so in the Standard oil works and the other on the Rockwood and Rutherford branch of the Erie. Then they began operations in a small scale, robbing their plunder on Garrett mount on the Palisades.

It was early in April when they started out from Paterson to rob all along the road. At a place called Hot away on the outskirts of Paterson they halted and solemnly bound themselves together with fearful oaths as the boy Hiram recalls it. It was then they were named the Hiram Band. His uncle Hiram was the commander in chief of the Gaddis Kingdom and his uncle Peter was dubbed the Prince Apparently James his other uncle has with not the children as any part in military style as high private. With a crook of revolver Hiram forced them to sign their names to a paper and James who is musical to turn such a cadence has great stress on the fact that the name signed for him and the band. Preparatory steps were taken to combine with the Stormy gang, also a select gang of some 1 and 2 have been in full James Hopper's will was minister with the accomplice.

Thus was formed a band of such reformation had been effected. Said Detective Clune.

Detectives Burke and Carson city of the night and through a negro woman who found out the hiding place. After Hiram was taken from Oakland they made a raid about during a few days ago. Hiram Hopper had become snappish and had raised objections to run for the wood. When he was found it was found full of stolen property but the inhabitants were not so. After a short scratch the woman and children were found. Hiram said will be tried in the day. Hiram and James were dis[illegible] in the w[illegible]. They chose rich livers and moves in the effect. [illegible] was very powerful and handcuffed. The boys Hiram and William were all organized but the lot of Hiram. Hiram succeeded in [illegible] his wife [illegible] the [illegible] and [illegible] fall [illegible] the capture.

The [illegible] was a perfect stock [illegible] certainly [illegible] the chance of Mr. Hiram. Hiram [illegible] many [illegible] men and women [illegible] and said [illegible] well [illegible] married and [illegible]. Our Re[illegible]

[illegible] Wednesday, May [illegible], 1881.

To Hon. James A. Garfield, President of the United States and a Portion of Your Staff.

Sir:—I have the honor to inform you that I have not heretofore any information as United States commissioner for the second judicial district court of Wyoming territory.

I do this in order to see whether I am considered by the people of Wyoming territory. I wish to know whether the people think less of me than they did of your [illegible] of administration.

This [illegible] of my office has not been great in operation, as it has during the past two years only [illegible] considerable.

You have since your inauguration appointed and sent into the senate for confirmation a cross eyed clam from Butte City to be deputy collector for the port of Stinking Water, with the wealth of patronage which [illegible] places. You have also appointed Larry Hogell Lamberson of Uinta County to be minister to Polecat Gulch, knowing very well that the patronage of Polecat Gulch belongs to me.

Ever since your inauguration you have balked and thwarted me in a thousand different ways till I am forced to send in to you my resignation with the assurance that the whole national fabric will go to eternal smash about the first of June.

In addition to all the rest you promised me that you would appoint any one in Berth to test of the port of Oshkosh without consulting me, and so soon as I got back in Washington I learned that you had appointed a bald headed polecat from Vinegar Hill to the position.

As soon as my resignation is made public the territory of Wyoming will withdraw from the Union and form a monarchy, and will be small fried hot for you and your officers republican that you will wish you had stuck to your mules along the Erie canal throughout your natural life.

If Wyoming an lot as my action as I think she will, you can bet your existence that your administration will be the bloodiest stretch of wide desolate hell that the world has ever known. Remember [illegible] this [illegible] $18 per annum that I look at. It is the patronage which has been taken from me.

You will please communicate to the senate and house of representatives that I have resigned, and these bodies can take such steps in relation to going into mourning in the country they think fit. This is the way I see it.

Hoping that you will manage to get along through your natural term of office in some way or other. I remain, yours in sorrow than in anger.

Your obedient servant,

[illegible]

Shipping Bees to America

From the Herald

The culture of bees in Naples, Italy, has given rise to an industry which appears likely to increase in importance. Hitherto, the supplies, queen bees and swarms to various countries in Europe and to America. The queen bees travel in wooden boxes accompanied by about two hundred working bees. The boxes have four slits for air inside, and two small frames one containing a full size and an empty honeycomb, they vary in size according to the distance they are sent. The Italian bees have the reputation of being more docile and productive than any other kind of bees, hence their value.

The Female Nihilists.

From Figaro.

They are mostly daughters of poor army officers or petty civil officers, or even of shop keepers who feeling the influence of modern times are anxious to be above the level of their parents. Young infant people in the main. Either by their own talents or in the girl's fathers, from the girls gain school ships and enter some high school which their brothers are crammed with knowledge. At 19 they leave and in their turn become teachers. Indignant with poverty uncompromisable they abandon home for some wretched hovel, and live out a miserable existence by giving private lessons. Land is since the finishing pictures of the state impossible, the restrainings of family affection is absent they grow depress and discontented, when some day they form socialistic acquaintances rapidly adopt their ideas and having found object for their life with feminine rashness devote themselves to the cause even to the very death.

JOHNNY WANLESS FOUND.

Picked up by the Marshal in Boulder

The Boulder Herald gives the following account of the discovery of the Wanless boy who ran away from Bruther Institute in Denver, and whose loss has been announced for days past. Monday night at about midnight, Marshal Bonnell met a little boy, about eleven years old, walking the streets to find some place to lie down to sleep. He immediately took him to Dopp's to sleep and this morning told Dr Ambrook of the affair. When the Herald reporter went around he found the boy sitting in the hall with the doctor, who was subjecting him to close questioning. The boy told a very plain story, well hatched up and with some foundation to back it. He gave his name as Charlie Bacon. He had just come from North Park.

We lived on a ranch so far from Laramie that it took three days to go to town and three to return. The nearest ranch to our place was the mill. My father died about six weeks ago and my mother about four. Two men, Tom and Jones buried my father and the same men buried my mother. Some ladies attended my mother's funeral. A man came along there with a wagon and I asked him to let me ride with him.

The next story was as follows: My father died about six weeks before my mother, up in North park; my mother died about four weeks ago. I then went to live with my uncle in Laramie city. He did not treat me well and I ran away from him. I then went up to the ranch to stay. It took me about seven days to get there. Then this man came along and I came with him to Boulder. When we went through Laramie city I hid in the bottom of the wagon, because my uncle and the policemen were hunting for me. We left the way of the stageline into Estes park near a big mountain. I have forgotten the name. I got off outside of town and the man went on to Lyonville. He told me to get out as there might be some danger.

The third story was this: Now I'll tell you exactly how it was. I ran away from my uncle and went to the ranch and then I came with this man. I had in the bottom of the wagon when we passed through Laramie. We then went to Cheyenne. We came through Longmont and Valmont and I got off because there was danger. My parents are dead and I want to go to Julesburg.

At the fourth attempt the boy said: My name is Johnnie Wanless. I ran away from the Bruther Institute in Denver because the boys there clubbed me. My father lives in Colorado Springs, and my mother is in Laramie. He has a letter from my mother and that will prove I tell the truth this time. And his eyes dropped as if conscious of victory.

Rapid Promotion

The Durango Record has brevetted Frank Condy, late of this city colonel, as will be seen by the following item quoted from the Record: Hon. C. W. Burris, district judge, and Colonel Frank C. Condy, district attorney, arrived from Parrott City on Saturday, and enjoyed Sunday in Durango. A pleasant call from these gentlemen favorably impressed us with their legal and social—duties, of which we had heard so much but hitherto known so little. The judge believes that Durango's future is great and expresses himself as in no wise opposed to living in our city provided that circumstances should so designate his futurity, while the colonel is completely carried away with the idea of coming to the metropolis, not as a guest but as a permanent limb of the law.

The members of the A. M. E. church held a festival last evening in Court House Hall. The church realized $124 51. A watch was raffled for and was won by Miss Carrie Clay. A valuable ring was won by Miss Ora Hosmer.

AWFUL ACCIDENT

Two Leadville Children Terribly Mangled by Giant Powder

LEADVILLE Col June 2—The Chronicle has an account of a terrible accident which occurred a few minutes past one o'clock on upper Fourth street, involving a fate infinitely worse than death to two children. The first information of the casualty was a terrific explosion audible for blocks, and taking place in the midst of a cluster of small houses. The crash was followed by piercing screams and an instant later the few who rushed out to investigate brought back the terrible news that two children had been terribly mangled by an explosion of giant powder. Eight children of the neighborhood went into a common in the rear of the houses to play. A quantity of wood had been split in the place and the ground was covered with a layer of chips and splinters. Two of the little ones named Walter and Lottie Smith, sat down and began amusing themselves in the debris. The little boy was only four years old, his sister six. In picking up the chips from the ground Walter found a stick of a gray, pasty substance, and shouted to his sister. They concluded to break it open and see if anything was inside. Walter found a large flat stone and placing the stick upon it began to strike the end with a piece of iron—his sister being near enough to watch. Several blows were struck and then with a stupendous crash the powder exploded, filling the air with debris and hurling the children half a dozen yards away. The boy lay on his face for an instant and then gathering his feet began to run blindly towards the opening between the houses. Striking against a post he fell down again, and once more tried to run but was too weak, and sank down moaning piteously, while the blood from half a dozen wounds trickled over his little dress. The girl was blown against the side of a house near by and was senseless when picked up. Her flesh was literally filled with gravel and her forehead and face one great ghastly wound. When her right hand was lifted three fingers were found merely hanging by strips of ragged flesh—and the bone and ragged bones protruded. The wounds in Jennie were horrible and the tiny feet so crushed and mutilated that it seems to indeed hundreds as they carried it in the lungs. The right hand had been blown off at the wrist and nothing but some stump and a few inches of tendons. When the left hand was taken there was but a mass of mangled flesh looking like nothing so much as chopped up meat. While both arms were jagged stumps and gravel in the shoulder. Terrible as these injuries were they spread into insignificance when it was learned that both eyes were blown completely out of the socket leaving the victim totally blind. The mother of the children was frantic with grief and could not be induced to be administered to quite long.

TRIBUNE TRIBULATIONS.

Answer to the Complaint of Colonel Fisher.

DENVER June 2—Tomorrow Tribune will say regarding the suit brought by C. W. Fisher up to the Tribune company to compel a transfer to the books of certain stocks. The stock in question which Mr Fisher now owns was last fall sold to the Tribune company on condition that the legal officers thereof should not be compelled for two years, and that to the minutemen the other holders should have an option on the purchase and vote the stock. The certificates of stock were issued expressly to him signed in blank to prove this interest and an agreement made that the stock was not to be transferred upon the books of the company to protect others in the pool. After Robinson's death his administrators demanded a transfer of the stock but were refused. An examination of the situation convinced them of the inability to change the original contract and they decided. When Mr Fisher came in possession he made the same demand and was refused. He purchased the stock with full knowledge that he was purchasing a law suit. In the complaint made in the District Court never has there been a question from the back of to-day's issue.

For value received I hereby sell transfer and assign to C. W. Fisher the five hundred shares of stock within mentioned and authorize J. H. Haynie secretary to make the necessary transfer on the books of the company.

[Signed] H. Sayre.

Dated Denver April 1881.

The endorsement above was filled in by the Fisher purchaser. Mr Dawson never was secretary of the Tribune publishing company and never had anything to do with the stockholders. The question involves an agreement made upon certain conditions which reserved to the Tribune publishing company certain rights. The company will defend in the courts and it has no fear of the result.

IRISH AGITATION

Extraordinary Address Made by Bishop Croke

DUBLIN June 2—Archbishop Croke of Thurles yesterday concluded a most extraordinary ecclesiastical campaign. He made an appeal to Gladstone to stop further evictions. In his speech he said: Eviction has a special meaning in Ireland. It means the depopulation of the country, degradation, flying to a foreign land, carrying the spirit of vengeance against the greatest empire in the world which has treated Ireland worse than ever an empire treated a dependency. He would therefore say to Gladstone: If you value the friendship of Ireland, if you value the good name of England, if you value the lives of our people, if you do not wish to perpetuate a national feud and the sanguinary traditions that have ruled this country for ages, blot out from the statute books the eviction, and let no man henceforth be turned out of his land unless it is clear that the money which have met his engagements was wasted fully and foolishly dissipated. [Loud cheers] It was only the other day that the venerable parish priest of Moycarkey told me that when he became priest of that parish it contained 1,200 families. There are at present only 400. Let me ask Mr Gladstone what has become of the 800 families once so happy in their humble homes, who have disappeared from the parish. Many have gone to the grave, many to the workhouse, and many to the great republic of the west, bearing with them undying hatred to the country that banished them from their native land. [Cheering] At the same time, if evictions are to go on I would advise you how to act. Do not bring yourselves into collision with the authorities, they are too strong for you. If not, even for conscience's sake, for our own preservation, for the sake of expediency if not of principle, we must act on the defensive. We must offer passive resistance to those opposed to us. In that way they will get tired of the contest, but mind, the whole united people has never yet been defeated.

In the evening his grace entered fully into the present position and aims of the Irish league. He declared the agitation was not due to Dillit nor Parnell nor their followers but to the fact that there was a plight grievance and that the Irish people at last contemplated it manfully and were determined to remove it. Without the priesthood of Ireland it would be impossible, said his grace, for the government to reach its present plights dimensions. The archbishop declared authoritatively that two years ago Parnell waited on him in Dublin and literally went down on his knees to him to ask him to use his influence to have the priests join the movement.

His grace concluded with the following remarkable declaration: I have to say—this movement is not a revolutionary movement in the strict sense of the word. It is a constitutional and lawful movement which we intend to push forward by moral force alone. [Cheers] We don't intend to violate any law, we intend to exhaust all constitutional remedies. We are perfectly certain that the elasticity of the constitution will allow us the means of working energetically to the last and finally achieving the results we aim at. We wish to produce an effect on England not by physical force or by any manifestation of force of force, but by moral means. We want to make our grievances known to the world to tell France and Spain, and Italy, and the United States and the great colonies that acknowledge the sway of Great Britain as does this country, that we have been kept down by bayonets to the present time, and that bayonets we are kept down at present. Please God, we are now fully determined, bayonets or no bayonets [great cheering] to put claim at all events our wants and to proclaim that we will not be satisfied until we get our rights and enlist in our behalf no swords, no guns no cannon, not Spain or Italy or the United States but the intelligent opinion of all intelligent nations of the world. Therefore, this is not a revolutionary movement but it is conducted by the most religious people in the world and backed by the best, most holy, most self-sacrificing, most faithful and most uncompromising priesthood in the world. [Great cheering] It is not an unjust or immoral or illegal or designed to do injury to anybody. We preach that there is no war against any injury to any human man. We are doing the best for the rights of the soil and we are under our own rights at the same time and while we give to Cæsar the things that are Cæsar's we will assert for ourselves the things that are ours. [Loud cheers] What we want is a chance for our lives in our own country and we will force it in the past. We will forget the numberless wrongs of England, all the trials we have had the misfortune that have been committed the extermination of our race and the slaughter of our forefathers. It is impossible for them to accomplish it at our dear country and we will begin a new story with the dominant country. We will let them see that we are not only to flourish alone but that in our own land we cannot be supported. [Cheers] I hear of disagreement among the leaders of the people but these things are exaggerated. Our phalanx is unbroken, our spirit undiminished and the result is therefore as clear as day. We must succeed.

There are a large number of Mormons in the city awaiting the opening season.

Mr. Plummer Connolly, of Detroit, Michigan, is in the city and expects to remain during the summer.

Chase Farmer Foley is having considerable work done on the entertainment center, on Nevada Avenue, and he purposes having it a splendid entertainment by August.

The residence in the southern part of the city have been largely occupied, previous to the opening season, and the prospect now is very much improving, the hope, in the Fountain creek section, which is proved most to prove to be true.

The new Rio Grande passenger coaches came into New York for the Denver & Rio Grande road have been received, and will be placed in position to open on the new road, which is completed.

Mine Inspector Thomas, of Durango, and Mr. W. E. Sheridan, of the Denver Opera House, are registered at the Antlers. Mr. Sheridan is here with the Ingomar company, and will open in Colorado Springs.

We noticed last evening some of the Manitou people, and many of those generally attractive and most popular ladies were present, and the city, and the Manitou people, and the Springs people, and the Springs people, and the Springs
